

Introduction to Government Contracting Webinar Series

Deltek, in partnership with George Mason University, is pleased to announce a new learning path designed to introduce participants to the fundamentals of government contracting. These courses are based on our highly successful contract management certification program.

The role of government contracting in our economy grows ever more important as we undertake a vast array of infra-structure projects and provide for our future defense. Class participants will meet the major players on the government side and develop an appreciation and understanding for their roles.

This learning path is designed to benefit individuals and organizations who are new to the government contracting marketplace and who wish to explore potential new markets for their products and services.
